

EMIS - THE SCHOOL FOR CHANGE

The Eastern Mediterranean International School (EMIS) in Hakfar Hayarok, Israel

EMIS, So much more than a school.

An Israeli, Belgian, Palestinian, Brazilian and Vietnamese walk into a room, and they leave with a groundbreaking environmental development that will eventually win an international competition. No, this isn't a joke, or a dream, or Silicon Valley - it's a Physics classroom at the Eastern Mediterranean International School (EMIS), Israel's first international boarding high school.

There is never a dull moment at EMIS. In February, a delegation of students visited New York and experienced the United Nations at work up close, and one of the EMIS students gave a speech on the UN stage. At the same time, the Model UN Club won First Prize in the MUN debate for the fourth year in a row. In April, students participated in a lively Israel-Palestine peace negotiation simulation.

During Culture Week on campus, students shared perspectives and traditions from their own countries, introducing others to their music, food, and dance. Even typical school days are exciting, and teachers' offices are packed with students presenting new ideas for classes, activities and programs. EMIS was founded in 2014 with the mission of "making education a force for peace and sustainability in the Middle East." With Israeli, Palestinian and international students from far and wide, the student body is extremely passionate and the extraordinary diversity makes EMIS a unique experience.

Located on the green campus of Hakfar Hayarok in central Israel, EMIS is home to 180 students from 40 different nationalities who live and study together for two to three years for the International Baccalaureate diploma program. Coming from a wide variety of cultures and languages, together they form a vibrant community of dedicated global citizens.

The prestigious IB international curriculum combines elective courses, personal projects and various extracurricular activities. Life on campus offers creative opportunities for every student. Students can participate in any sport activity of their choosing, take art classes with trips to inspirational galleries and exhibitions, hear lectures from Nobel Prize winners, or volunteer in refugee centers.

At EMIS, students shape many programs themselves. They lead dozens of committees, projects and clubs; they volunteer in schools and engage in local and global causes. One of their flagship projects is YOCOPAS, an international youth movement for peace and sustainability.

Students at EMIS have plenty of time and freedom to do what they love, whether it's hiking, caring for animals, sports or art. Whatever their passion, students are empowered to get involved and make a difference.

Take a few minutes during your trip in Israel and add a visit to EMIS to your itinerary. You won't regret the chance to see such a dynamic community in action. You have to see it to believe it!
